AXA product range 2017/2018

AXA lock range

4-23

The AXA lock range is very diverse and has a suitable lock for each bike. Our safe locks provide optimal protection for long and short term parking.

AXA lighting range

24-39

Visibility is an absolute must if you participate in traffic. The AXA lighting range complies with the latest requirements in the field of safety and light output.

AXA chain protection

39-43

AXA chain protection offers effective protection against dirt of the chain and of your clothes and is iconic for the design of a bicycle.

“You opt for AXA, you opt for safety!”

FOR EACH BIKER THE RIGHT SECURITY

To help making the right choice AXA has classified her locks in security levels, with level 1 representing the lightest cable lock and level 25 representing the strongest chains with which you can also protect mopeds, scooters and motorcycles. These locks are mostly ART approved. This makes them suitable for closing a bike insurance.

BASIC SAFETY

Safety level 1 to 6

Locks with safety levels 1 to 6 are ideal if your bicycle is parked for a short period in an area where the chance of theft is small.

MEDIUM SAFETY

Safety level 7 to 10

Locks with safety level 7 to 10 are classified as good security for your bike and are suitable for bikes which are parked at school or at a crowded place with a lot of public.

HIGH SAFETY

Safety level 11 to 15

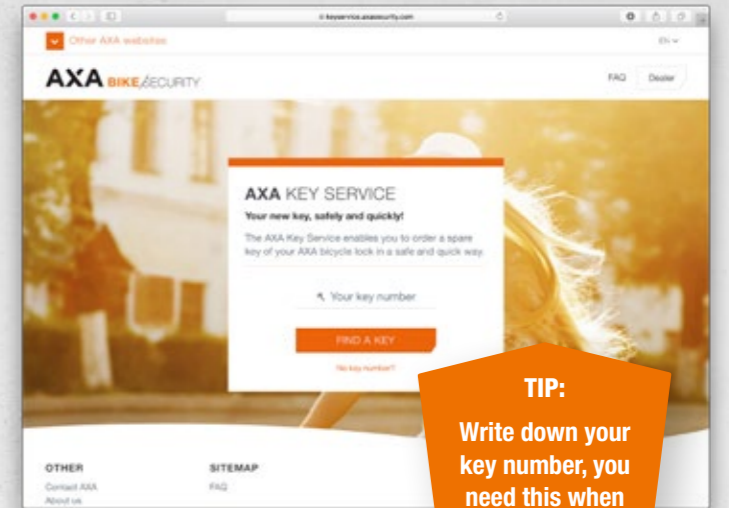

Do you live in a busy city or do you need to park your bike for a long time on theft sensitive places? Then choose a lock with safety level 11 to 15, the ultimate protection for your bike! These locks are often approved with a quality label, and are therefore suitable for closing a bike insurance.

BIKE LIGHTS

In the AXA product range brochure different terms are used to term product features. In order to be able to make a good estimate of the product you need, it is therefore useful to know what these terms means. Below you can find a brief description of some product features.

What is the difference between Lux and Lumen?

In the lighting industry, there are two terms that can be used to indicate the brightness of a light, namely Lux and Lumen.

But what is the difference between them?

The difference between Lux and Lumen is the way the amount of light is measured. Lumen is the amount of light which the light emits from the source per time unit, regardless of where the light radiates. Lux, on the other hand, is the amount of light that falls on a surface, for example on a square meter.

At AXA lighting products the number of Lux is always mentioned. This term gives information on how much light is shining on the road and so how much sight you experience: extra safe!

What means 'To See' and 'To Be Seen'

When you are cycling and participating in traffic, it is important to both see well by yourself, as to be seen by other road users. For this reason in this brochure a distinction is made between "To See" and "To Be Seen".

"To See" indicates how far you can see with the lighting by yourself. This lighting is mainly used by cyclists who are often cycling on poorly lit roads and use the light to have a good view of the road.

"To Be Seen" indicates how many meters you can be seen by other road users. This lighting is especially useful when you are cycling in the city and want to be seen on well-lit roads.

Extra safe on your way

To give you even more visibility on the road, AXA has different lamps in the assortment with steady light function and/or daytime safety light. These additional features offer you even more safety in traffic.

Different dynamo front and rear lights are equipped with the steady light function and it ensures that your bicycle light keeps shining up to 4 minutes when stopping for example at a traffic light. This provides additional visibility on the road, even if you don't ride!

AXA's daytime safety light not only ensures good visibility in the evening, but also good visibility during the day. AXA's daytime safety light offers you this security because during the day, two extra bright Led's make sure you remains visible even with sunlight.
